ilized portion of this world, as this great Republic. All men look at us. All men examine our course. All good men are anxious for a favorable result to this great experiment of the hill, and we can't be hidden. We can't withdraw ourselves from the commendation or reproaches of the civilized world. They see us as that star of empire which, half a century ago, was predicted as making its way west ward. I wish that they may see it as a mild, brilliant, though placid orb, making its way athwart the heavens, to the enlightenment and cheering of mankind-not as a meteor of fire and blood, terrifying the nations.
